Homework policy

Reviewed: Autumn 2017

Next review: annually, unless any changes are required prior to this

Definition

Homework is anything children do outside the normal school day, in response to school guidance, encouragement or prompt, which contributes to their learning.

Rationale

Educational experience that a school by itself provides is limited; children benefit from wider, complementary experiences out of school. However, some prompts and guidance from school can direct these experiences and develop greater learning. We see homework as an important example of cooperation between teachers and parents/carers. An aim of our teaching is to promote independent learners; homework is one of the ways in which children can acquire the skill of independent learning.

We recognise the importance of quality family time; this policy should help to promote opportunities to be creative rather than labour over frequent worksheets or carry out activities that pupils and/or parents/carers may not understand.

Whilst homework develops children's learning and independence, quality family time, play and free time are also important. Homework should not prevent children from taking part in wider activities such as those offered by out-of-school clubs and other organisations. Children develop their interests and skills to the full only when parents/carers encourage them to make maximum use of the opportunities available outside school.

In Sphere Federation, we refer to educational research. Research indicates that homework can provide some impact on improving outcomes. Schools whose pupils do homework tend to be more successful, although this may not be a causal relationship. Research indicates the following two points, around which our policy is based, are important:

- Effective homework is associated with greater parental involvement and support.
- The broader evidence base suggests that short focused tasks or activities which relate directly to what is being taught, and which are built upon in school, are likely to be more effective than regular daily homework. (See Education Endowment Foundation's Teaching and Learning Toolkit.)

Aims and principles

We value homework for our children in order to:

- enable them to make progress in their academic and social development
- promote cooperation between home and school in supporting learning
- enable aspects of the curriculum to be explored and enriched
- develop skills as independent learners
- consolidate and reinforce learning in school and to enable practice at home
- help children develop good work habits, increasing their chances of future economic well-being
- celebrate diversity and explore issues around SMSC (spiritual, moral, social and cultural development)

Homework tasks

Children will be given one of the following types of homework each week (with a broad balance across all three over the year).

Talk Time

usually centred around a question

Creative

usually centred around an 'I can...' statement

Practice Makes Perfect

Occasionally, we may decide to differentiate homework to suit the task or individual pupil. For example, there may be more Practice Makes Perfect for someone who needs it due to a specific learning need or family background issue; or a task might combine two types.

Sometimes, homework tasks will be set which are the same for the whole school eg a task linked to a themed week. We might also invite a child to share some aspects about their own background (sharing key vocabulary in a home language, perhaps – this should only be done if the child is comfortable and confident to do so).

Over the course of the year, children in Reception will increasingly be asked to do some of the elements noted; they will be working towards the expectations set out.

In addition, there is:

- 🌀 a weekly spelling task; this will typically alternate between a spelling challenge (an activity) and a spelling list to learn (in preparation for a test on the following Friday)
- 🌀 a weekly times tables; each week, there will be a times tables to practise for a test on Fridays (these will gradually begin over the course of Year 2)

Teachers should make clear high expectations.

Good homework should be celebrated. We will communicate to parents/carers if homework is of a regular poor standard, or which is regularly not handed in.

If a child gets a low score for a series of weeks, teachers should take action:

- 🌀 due to some specific SEN issue: teachers should differentiate the lists in order to cater for this
- 🌀 due to the child not learning them: the child would need to stay in for some playtimes to learn; teachers will need to alert parents and/or arrange a meeting with parents/ carers

Homework amount

We believe the frequency of homework set out here provides the right balance for pupils and meets the expectations of most parents. Staff may occasionally provide additional homework; this will amount to two or three extra pieces across the year. As an alternative, staff will be happy to suggest to parents other ways they can support their child's learning at home.

There will be no homework during holiday periods. Occasionally, there will be exceptions to the daily and weekly routines eg during the Y6 residential trip; towards the end of a busy term.

We do not authorise unnecessary term-time absence. Because of this, extra homework will not be given to children whose families are going on a term-time holiday. Where a term-time absence is necessary and unavoidable, staff encourage parents to do extra reading and practise / revise spellings, tables, handwriting etc; staff also refer families to the website where additional ideas and activities are described to support their child's learning. In the case of a long-term illness, teachers will provide some tasks if parents/carers ask.

For all children, there is the opportunity for further learning at home using Mathletics, and similar apps or software.

We also expect children to read frequently.

Role of parents / carers

The following text will be used by teachers occasionally; it might be pasted into Homework Books or posted on the website.

Talk Time

The purpose of Talk Time homework is to encourage a conversation around children's current learning. We want our children to be expert talkers, using a variety of sentences and expressions, and able to back up their points or disagree with others in a polite way. Talk Times help writing, too: it's hard to be a good writer if you're not a good speaker; using ambitious words, useful phrases, interesting sentences is a great way to support your child. (Please don't forget we also want your comments in Homework Books about the Talk Time and how your child has contributed to discussions.)

Children shouldn't spend a lot of time on the presentation of the Talk Time homework. Instead, children should make notes, which will act as a prompt when it is discussed in class the following week. For this reason, teachers tend to give verbal feedback during their talk time session in class.

Creative

This is where your child's creative juices can flow! Creative homework is an opportunity for your child to choose whatever they want to demonstrate some learning. For example, I can show what I know about food chains. Your child could present all their learning in so many different ways, from a diagram with notes to a story or comic strip. Parents' and carers' role is to support, encourage, help... but never to take over and do the homework! Teachers always look forward to seeing how creative children can be. If you notice the work has not been marked, please don't worry. Teachers will have looked at and celebrated the homework in another way - the work might have been viewed by the whole class using a visualiser which allows the work to be projected to the whole class and a discussion of 'stars and steps' will happen. Peer assessment is also effective - children are very able to share what's good and what needs improving! These sorts of verbal feedback strategies are often more effective than a written comment because it's more instant and it makes sure the child understands - and their work is praised publicly! (If you'd like to add a comment about the homework and how your child went about it, please do: teachers would welcome this.)

Practice Makes Perfect

This is similar to what you might consider traditional homework: it may be a worksheet or a writing task. Practice Makes Perfect is useful homework when something has been taught in school but needs consolidation. The work should be fairly straightforward for the child as there should be no need for new learning, so just some encouragement from you is needed. However, it would be a great time to get your child to teach you - they should be able to explain the key points or processes! We may use this type of homework less often because usually the best practice is where a teacher can keep feeding back and presenting new challenges when they see it as appropriate. Teachers mark these activities in line with our marking policy.

Note: our cursive handwriting method is expected in written work.

Additional information on expectations / roles of parents / carers

Parents/carers play a vital role in their child's education, including homework. They should help by encouraging and discussing ideas (see Homework Guide, particularly Top Tips) and by ensuring their child has a good working space at home. Parents/carers should contact the class teacher or head of school with questions or concerns.

Parents / carers are sometimes invited into school to view homework by pupils in the class – this is an opportunity for children to develop their speaking skills and to feel proud of their achievements.

They are also encouraged to comment about their child's homework: the content, their child's approach to the homework, how the child felt, the finished homework etc. This can be done by writing a comment in the Homework Book or during a meeting with the class teacher.

Inclusion and equal opportunities

We set homework for all children as a normal part of school life. We ensure that the tasks set are appropriate to the ability of the child. Often, tasks are open-ended so each child can enjoy and achieve to their full potential. If the task is not open-ended (eg Practice Makes Perfect Homework, for example), homework will be adapted/differentiated. Homework requirements set out in the policy may, very occasionally, be adapted on an individual basis.

Social, moral, spiritual, cultural development

We aim to promote SMSC in homework; sometimes, this will be by directly addressing SMSC development in specific weeks eg:

'I know what democracy is.'

'I can respond to some art.'

We value and celebrate the diversity of our pupils and their families and we appreciate the enrichment that this brings. Often, homework tasks can encompass this diversity eg:

'I can describe a home.' → present information about a country of origin or a country where a relative lives.

'I know how instructions are used.' → present a sequence of steps to make some particular food.

Celebrating diversity can be especially pertinent around a religious festival. Therefore, teachers might present to their class a choice. For example:

Homework this week is creative. It's the second of three homework tasks this school year when we invite children to respond to something from a cultural or spiritual perspective (we've timed these so they fall close to religious festivals, from Eid to Easter).

I can respond to a programme or film I've seen.

We'd like children to present their responses about a recent programme or film they've seen. We're interested to hear your child's opinions and any connections they might have made between the programme or film and their own life. This might include pictures, an interview (you could write a fictional script between an interviewer and a character), a letter (eg to or from a character) – anything which might include your child's responses!

However, your child might prefer to do the following:

I can show what Passover or Easter means to me and my community.

Recently, some children will have celebrated the Christian festival of Easter or the Jewish festival of Passover. We invite children to respond to the sentence above – they might include a recount (like a diary entry), pictures, an interview (perhaps in a script), or any other creative response.

Homework Guide

I work and learn at school...

Daily Expectations

There are also lots of websites and apps that can support useful skills. We use Mathletics at school and encourage your child to spend some occasional, short periods of time using this.

Spellings The weekly spelling task will alternate between a spelling challenge (an activity) and a spelling list of around ten words to learn (ready for a Friday test). Spellings might relate to tricky words, high-frequency words, or important spelling rules / patterns. Daily practice for a short while is more effective than last-minute 'cramming' on Thursday night.	Reading Reading is so important: it could be fiction, non-fiction, magazines, websites – anything! Reading to your child is really valuable for all children, so even a bedtime story counts! A minimum of 10-15 minutes daily reading is expected. If your child has a Reading Record (younger children), we expect comments at least once a week.	Times Tables (Y2 – Y6) By the end of Y4, pupils should know their times tables up to 12x12. This means being able to say the answer to a multiplication or division question within about five seconds. Tables tests take place on Fridays. Daily practice for a short while is more effective than last-minute 'cramming' on Thursday night.
Top Tips: Parents / carers could also work with the child by using the words in written sentences or stories (to also practice handwriting and punctuation) or even in conversations (speaking and listening for the words).	Top Tips: Reading aloud to an adult is encouraged, even for older children. Also very important is discussing the texts with the child eg asking questions about the characters in a book, the layout of a factual book and the views of a website or magazine.	Top Tips: Parents / carers should work with the child by working out different strategies and 'top tips'. Practice in the car, walking to school etc all helps. Chanting forwards, backwards and alternating as you count through can all help, as can CDs and internet games.

Weekly Expectations

Homework is handed out on Friday and returned on Thursday. It should take a minimum of around 30-40 minutes, possibly carried out over a few days. Parents' comments in the homework books are welcome.

Creative homework This involves a creative piece of open-ended work based around an 'I can...' statement eg 'I can spot fractions.' or 'I know how instructions are used.' As a general guide, your child should stick to just one page of A4 (unless the teacher says otherwise!). Content will be a balanced mix of subjects.	Talk Time homework This involves a discussion topic eg 'Should animals be kept in zoos?' Children should make notes (even pictures, diagrams etc) ready to participate in a class / group discussion on the topic. Please make sure you write a comment about the Talk Time discussions in the homework books.	Practice Makes Perfect homework Sometimes a worksheet or series of questions might be useful to develop skills and speed eg practising column addition or a type of grammar or punctuation. Mathletics tasks might sometimes be a Practice Makes Perfect homework task.
Top Tips: Be as creative as you like! Chat about ideas with your child: Could the homework be in the form of a collage of pics, a letter, a comic strip, some writing...? Could it use photos, drawings, fold-out 'extras' on the page...?	Top Tips: Turn the telly off! Sit around the dining table! Have a chat and share opinions and ideas! Children should talk with family, friends and each other – maybe even using FaceTime or Skype.	Top Tips: Take care not to confuse your child! This homework will be given out when the teacher knows your child can do the work using a particular method taught. Ask your child to explain methods, talking through what they're doing, and to check their answers.
