

Moon-Face's house in the tree, was very peculiar. It was one round room, and in the middle of it was the beginning of the slippery-slip that ran down the whole trunk of the tree, winding round and round like a spiral staircase. Round the top of the slide was a curved bed, a curved table, and two curved chairs, made to fit the roundness of the tree trunk. The children were astonished, and wished that they had time to stay for a while.
